By order entered on September 20, 2012, we remanded this case to the trial court with the instruction that the trial court was to “make further factual findings, regarding whether the best interest of the children, other than the twins, is [] best served by termination of their mother’s parental rights” and “whether termination in this case will actually serve the goal of providing the children with stability.” We retained jurisdiction. We are in receipt of the supplemental findings of the trial court and a transcript of the remand proceedings, both of which we have reviewed. Based on our review of the record and the supplemental findings, we are now convinced that the trial court correctly determined that the best interests of the eldest child is not served by the termination of respondent’s parental rights, but that the best interests of the remaining two younger children is served by termination. Accordingly, we AFFIRM. This appeal is now closed.
