---

The Court orders that, in lieu of granting the delayed application for leave to appeal, this case is REMANDED to the trial court for redetermination of the number of days of jail credit to which defendant is entitled toward the sentence in this case. MCR 7.205(E)(2). It appears that defendant may actually be entitled to 51 days of jail credit but that the judgment of sentence only provides for 43 days of jail credit due to an erroneous statement at the sentencing proceeding. If the trial court determines on remand that defendant is entitled to additional days of jail credit it shall enter an amended judgment of sentence providing the proper number of days of jail credit.

We do not retain jurisdiction.
