We conditionally reversed the order of termination of parental rights in this case because the record submitted to this Court did not contain documentation of ICWA compliance. 25 USC 1912(a). We remanded the matter to the trial court for it to determine whether in fact the relevant tribes had received notice pursuant to ICWA, 25 USC 1912(a), and whether the tribes had sought to intervene. On remand, the trial court described the relevant evidence, and it does demonstrate that notice was provided to the relevant tribe(s) and that no intervention was sought. Based on its findings, the trial court, per our order of remand, reinstated the order of termination. For the reasons set forth in our original opinion, the hearing on remand, and this order, we affirm the trial court's order of termination. We do not retain jurisdiction.
